ANTI-JAP RESOLUTION

The now pending congressional investigation of the Japanese land question on this coast receiving much publicity in the daily press, lends added emphasis to a resolution passed by the Los Gatos post of the American Legion a few meetings ago. This resolution emphatically condemns the acquisition of land by purchase or lease by Japanese, the "picture bride" menace and the border smuggling scandal. It also provides for public announcement of individuals or firms selling, leasing, or handling in any way whatsoever a deal to allow Japanese to come into possession of California land. The legion takes the stand California is for the white race, and discourages any and all Asiatic immigration.

FORMER SARATOGA GIRL KILLED BY HUSBAND

Vancouver, B. C., July 24—(Associated Press)—W. G. Robbins, a long-shoreman, confessed he shot and killed his wife in a park here Monday evening and then made daily visits to the spot, placing flowers upon the body, police officials declared. Robbins gave himself up yesterday and led police to the scene of the shooting.

Mrs. Robbins was a daughter of F. L. Yorke of Victoria, B. C., and a niece of Fr. Yorke, a Catholic priest of San Francisco. Her father was in the contracting business in San Francisco for many years and shortly before moving to British Columbia in 1911 was manager of Congress Springs, near San Jose.

While his wife lay dying, Robbins is alleged to have said, they discussed the shooting and at first decided to make it appear Mrs. Robbins committed suicide. "For the sake of the children," according to the alleged confession, they rejected the plan and "decided that Mrs. Robbins should be killed."

Robbins then shot Mrs. Robbins three times through the head and concealed the body in underbrush, he is said to have told the officers.

Wednesday afternoon Robbins visited the body with the intention of committing suicide, but "lost his nerve," he declared.

Mrs. Robbins was formerly Miss Alice Yorke.

WATER CONSERVATION

Work will be commenced on the preliminary water survey immediately, according to action taken by the water commission committee in executive session. The committee has retained Fred Keefer and Fred A. Tibbets, engineers from San Francisco, who will establish engineers' headquarters in San Jose and will employ others to go into the valley and do the actual work of the survey.

The committee still needs about $5000 to bring their funds up to the desired quota. Those who wish to assist this work which is so vital to the future happiness and success of the grower here may do so by communicating with any of the committee or with the committee treasurer, Irwin Pomeroy, at the Prune and Apricot Growers, Inc. Charles E. Warren of Cupertino and who is candidate for the fifth supervisory district, is chairman of the general committee.

No use telling your troubles to the wind—they're nothing to blow about.

PREFERS INDEPENDENCE TO HIGH POSITION

means that all political parties in the Philippines are united for independence.

The luncheon was given for members of both houses of the Philippine legislature by former Senator Gabaldon, recently chosen resident commissioner at Washington.

Sergio Osmena, speaker of the Philippine house of representatives and head of the dominant Nacionalista party, who was recently termed "the greatest Filipino since Rizal," addressing Senator Gabaldon, said:

"We urge upon you in your capacity of resident commissioner to the United States to tell Congress and the people of that noble country that we who are gathered here today would prefer to be the lowest and humblest citizens of the Philippines with independence in our hands than the leaders that we now are in our country under the tutelage of another country."

Experience.

"A man who has been employed in a piano factory wants to know if we can't give him a job as a film actor."

"How is he qualified?"

"He says he has had plenty of experience in the movie business."

Anything Else?

Sapp—Ah, there, bright eyes, is the boss in?

Snapp—No, he is not.

Sapp—Will he be back after lunch?

Snapp—No, that is what he went after.

TRAVELED 8,000 MILES WITH ONE TEAM OF HORSES

Frank A. Miller enjoyed a visit last Sunday from John J. Hoy, a friend whom he had not seen in many years. Mr. Hoy was traveling with a team of horses and two dogs and had come all the way from his wheat fields at Edmonton, Canada, to his oil fields at Bakersfield and is now returning. He is a typical old prospector with a long white beard and is commonly known as "Uncle Sam." He says that in the last eighteen months he has traveled 8,000 miles.

RIZAL, FILIPINO MARTYR, WROTE REMARKABLE POEM

By FORMER CONGRESSMAN CLYDE H. TAVENNER.

DR. JOSE RIZAL, The Filipino Patriot.

myself offer the example of which I have always preached. A man ought to die for duty and his principles. I hold fast to every idea which I have advanced as to the condition and future of our country, and shall willingly die for it. I hold duties of conscience above all else. Besides I wish to show those who deny us patriotism that we know how to die for duty and principles.

While Rizal was in Europe working for Philippine reforms, the Spanish governor-general, to indirectly punish Rizal, carried on a relentless persecution of his parents and relatives in the Philippines, driving them into exile. To his parents Rizal left a second letter, saying: "Should fate go against me you will understand that I shall die happy in the thought that my death will end all your troubles. Return to our country and may you be happy in it. Till the last moment of my life I shall be thinking of you and wishing you all good fortune and happiness."

Spain had meanwhile determined on having Rizal's life, foolishly thinking that if his voice was stilled agitation for the reforms he championed would end. Rizal was arrested on a trumped up charge of treason and condemned to death. But no sooner had the firing squad completed its work than the teachings of Rizal almost instantaneously became the passionate inspiration of the whole Filipino race. His unjust execution had simply transferred the intense patriotism of Rizal to the breasts of an entire nation of people. The Philippine nationalism of today dates from the sunny morning of December 30, 1896, when Rizal was led forth from his prison to willingly give, as he himself said, his life for his country's redemption.

While touring in the Philippines recently the conviction was ever present in my mind, and I could not throw it off, that the real inspiration as well as the leadership of the Filipino people in their present desire for independence is the spirit of Jose Rizal. The memory of Rizal and the desire for independence seem to be synonymous in the mind of the average Filipino.

Rizal is the inspiration of all classes, of old and young, of all the people he is not dead, for his spirit is everywhere in that beautiful land. His picture adorns the homes of the poorest families; streets, avenues and cities are named in his honor, while his statue stands in the parks and public squares. In life Rizal was a beautiful character, kind and considerate of all, gladly giving his life for his country, and in memory he has become the national idol. With such a spirit as its national inspiration the Philippines can not help but reach heights now not dreamed of.

While awaiting death in his cell during his last night on earth Rizal wrote a remarkable poem, "My Last Farewell." He secreted the manuscript in an alcohol cooking lamp, where it was found after his execution. It follows:

Many motorists carry a flashlight in their cars, and this little piece of equipment is extremely valuable for emergency use

SUCCESS

If you think you're beaten, you are. If you think you dare not, you don't. If you'd like to win but think you can't It's almost a cinch you won't. If you think you'll lose, you're lost— For, out in the world you'll find Success begins with a fellow's will, It's all in the state of mind.

ROMANCE ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Under Police Guard Man Is Taken to Hospital Where Girl Is Dying, and Marriage Ceremony Is Performed.

Chicago.—Viola Carpenter and Robert M. Taylor were married one night recently in the Lakeside hospital. The girl was dying from a bullet wound. The man was under guard of the police. When the priest had finished the man went back to his cell, weeping, and the bride died with a smile. This was the end of their romance that began two years ago in Akron, O., where Taylor was employed. Viola, an orphan, had been living with some relatives in Cedarville, Ind., but had left them and gone looking for work. "I came upon her when she was all but starved and very tired," said Taylor. "I loved her at first glance and she loved me. I promised to marry her."

Shoots Girl in Accident.

"We came to Chicago some time ago and went to live in a flat at 4328 Berkeley avenue. We were known as Mr. and Mrs. Taylor. We were very happy."

"There was just one thing that troubled her: we were not married. I got a license, but I kept putting off the wedding."

"Then came the accident. It was shortly before midnight. We were awakened by a noise. We thought at first it was a burglar, but we found it wasn't and we laughed. Viola said she didn't think I'd shoot a burglar if I found one. I aimed the gun at her and said: 'I'd shoot him just like that.' I heard the shot. I saw the wound. But I couldn't believe it. It was too terrible."

That was the story Taylor told to Capt. James Madden and Lieut. Maurice Crotty at the Hyde Park station. The girl had declared all along that she shot herself.

"I suppose you know she's going fast?" said Crotty.

"Oh, let me marry her, then," said Taylor. "Please. It is what she wishes most. We have the license and the ring."

The police authorities agreed. The girl cried with joy when she saw Taylor and the priest. She wished to be baptized and to be married, she said.

The Nuptials of Death.

Taylor knelt beside the bed and kissed her while the priest put on surplice and stole. The detectives stepped aside. A handful of nurses and doctors stood near the open door.

Taylor knelt by the side of the bed. The slim white hand of the girl was placed in his. It was very still in the room, save for the voice of the priest, until he came to the words: "Do you take this man—," when the bride exclaimed, "Oh, I do, I do."

And when he said: "Do you take each other for husband and wife, to have and to hold, in richness, in poverty, in sickness and in health, until death do you part?" the bridegroom looked at the girl soon to die, and sobbed.

But the bride's eyes were shining and held no tears.

She fell back with a little sigh.

"Then I pronounce you man and wife."

The bride held to her lips the finger that bore the wedding ring and then her husband kissed it.

So the priest went on, giving the sacrament of extreme unction. Presently he was done.

The church bells tolled somewhere it was six o'clock.

"Good-by, my bride," said Taylor. He kissed her ring again and then her lips.

"Good-by, my husband," she whispered. "And don't be sad. I am very happy."

And If It Wasn't.

The man who had served throughout the war as a private in the base hospital at Angers was loud in his scorn of a neighbor who hadn't gone into the service at all. A friend let him rave on till the Angers soldier had used the word slacker. Then he said:

"That's right, give it to him. All he did during the war was hang on to a nice soft job as testing pilot for the Curtiss people. All he had to do was to fly each machine long enough to see if it was safe for one of our aviators."—The Home Sector.

Mrs. T. M. Marshall and children left yesterday for their home at Boulder Colo., after visiting here for the past six weeks with Mrs. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woodbury. They will later go to St. Louis, Mo., where Mr. Marshall will teach in the Washington University.

Miss Laura Blaine, who is spending her summer at Asilomar as a "stuck-up" enjoying her outing and recuperative effects of sea breezes, was home Monday to Wednesday, renewing acquaintances. She is very much improved and reports a delightful time on declares his friends have not staked any of it out for him.

AUTO CAMPING

Because of the great multitude of automobiles now in use, the freedom of the outdoor life and the ability to make camp any time and at any place, auto camping has become not only a fad but a sensible and economical method for taking a vacation.

If one expects to make frequent stops and be on the move most of the time, it is almost essential that the luggage, such as supplies, bedding, tents, etc., must be carried along with the automobile, either piled on to the car or carried on a trailer. This entails a great additional weight on the automobile and if four or five are going the weight of the necessary equipment will amount up to almost as much as that of the members of the party, and if the roads are rough and steep an unnecessary strain is put upon the machine.

However, if one is going to make a permanent camp at some distant point and wants to drive to it as quickly as possible, and will stop in hotels on the way, the problem of luggage can be reduced to a minimum.

The writer camped in the vicinity of Lake Tahoe in the summer of 1919 and found that he could ship all of his equipment by Parcel Post.

The zone system of postage on parcel post makes it possible for one to transport his equipment at a very small expense within a certain radius. All that is necessary is to keep down the size of the package under seventy pounds in weight and when standing on the floor it must not be over eighty-four inches from top to bottom plus the circumference of the package.

The cost of this size and weight anywhere within the third postal zone is five cents. For the first pound and one cent for each additional pound.

The third postal zone from Los Gatos goes north almost to Ukiah, which will take in all of the Lake County country; it goes east taking in Tahoe and Yosemite down as far as Visalia, and goes south below San Luis Obispo.

This is the general outline of the territory covered. The exact boundaries can be learned from the postoffice department.

On the trip of the writer last summer he shipped thirteen packages, weighing four hundred and twenty-five pounds, for $4.77.

WHILE JAPAN, like every other country with a national consciousness, has plenty of jingoes, it appears certain that her men in authority have no thought of such a thing as war with the United States. They have their hands full with the enterprises they have set on foot in Asia, and besides, they are wise enough to know that war with the United States would be no summer holiday. The spectacle of the United States raising, equipping, and training four millions of men in a few months and spending money by the billion for war, was not lost upon the Japanese, to whom a million looks considerably bigger than a billion does to us. —S. F. Chronicle.

In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I hesitate to draw the line

AN OPEN LETTER TO CAMPBELL VOTERS

San Jose, Cal., August 4, 1920.
Editor of Campbell Interurban Press,
Campbell, Cal.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly permit me the use of your columns for a brief statement in support of the candidacy of Robert R. Syer for Judge of the Superior Court? Ever since I began the practice of law I have been more or less closely associated with Mr. Syer and believe that I know him and his qualifications thoroughly. Without hesitation or qualification I endorse his candidacy and trust and believe that he will be elected.

Mr. Syer, during his twenty-six years of successful practice in San Jose, has proven his ability and his marked qualification for judicial position. He is particularly qualified by reason of his freedom from prejudice and his open minded method of attacking all problems. The lawyers of each community are in favored position to learn and judge of a man's qualifications for the bench and the fact that at least eighty per cent of the lawyers of Santa Clara County, representing all factions, are for Syer for Judge, is strong evidence of his fitness for the position.

Except for the first four years, Mr. Syer's life has been spent in Santa Clara County, his parents, with their family, removing from Baltimore in 1874 and settling between Berryessa and Milpitas. In 1888 Syer received his bachelors degree and the degree of Master of Arts in 1889. After spending two years in the law offices of Judge Lawrence Archer and Nicholas Bowden, he entered Hastings College of Law with advanced standing and was graduated in 1894, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Upon his admission to the bar in 1894 he entered the law offices of William P. Veuve, at that time one of the leading trial lawyers of San Jose, and remained with him until 1897 when he opened offices of his own. In 1902 he was invited by Judge Hiram D. Tuttle to an association, which association has never been broken.

Trusting that your readers and their friends will investigate Mr. Syer's record and give him their support, I am,

Sincerely yours,
L. D. Bohnett.

MR. FOX & THE BEARS

MR. FOX could not climb; he could take long leaps and jumps, but of what use would jumping be when he wanted to gather grapes that grew high in a tree where the vine had twined around the branches.

"Such fine grape wine and jelly as those wild grapes would make if only I could climb," thought Mr. Fox, looking up at the grapes far out of his reach.

Just then he saw running along through the woods little Billy and Teddy Bear, and he knew that they could climb.

"Come here, youngsters, and get these grapes for me and I will give you some honey when I get home," he said.

Now Mr. Fox did not have any honey and he had no intention of paying the little fellows anything, "for," he said, "they would climb anyway just for fun; why not climb and help me?"

Up the tree went Teddy and Billy and soon Mr. Fox had his big basket heaped with grapes.

"When will we get the honey?" asked the little fellows.

"Oh, some day when you are passing stop in," said Mr. Fox, all careless like, as if any day would do.

The next morning bright and early Teddy and Billy called at the door of Mr. Fox's house, but he told them he was too busy to stop and get the honey just then, and they could call again.

They were good-natured little fellows and did not mind, but when they called another time and Mr. Fox gave another excuse and no honey, they made up their minds he did not intend to give them anything for getting the grapes.

One morning Mr. Fox had his grape wine all made and poured into bottles, which he placed in the window to cool while he made his jelly. Billy and Teddy saw the bottles and back home they ran. When they returned they brought a big jug filled with vinegar and, emptying the wine out of Mr. Fox's bottles, they filled them with the vinegar, and off they ran.

Not long after, when Mr. Fox had finished his jelly, he thought some cool grape wine would taste good, so he sat down by the window and, tipping up the bottle, began to drink.

He took a good, long, deep drink, and then he dropped the bottle and howled.

Teddy and Billy Bear had been waiting to hear this noise and they came running up to the window. "Did you call us, Mr. Fox?" they asked very sweetly; "we thought you wanted to give us the honey."

But Mr. Fox was jumping about on his hind legs and holding his stomach and making so much fuss he could not answer.

"What is the matter, Mr. Fox?" asked the mischievous little fellow; "were those grapes sour like the ones your great-grandfather did not get?"

Mr. Fox did not reply; he was far too unhappy just then, but later, when he felt better, he looked under the window where the bottle stood and saw on the ground a big dark spot, and he wished he had been honest with Teddy and Billy Bear and not treated them so badly.

A SUMMER DINNER.

A pleasing beginning for a dinner is some sort of fruit cocktail, served well chilled in dainty stemmed glasses, garnished with a sprig of mint or a maraschino cherry on the edge of the glass. There is such wide range in fruits that one may have at any season something worth while.

A very pretty and delicious fruit cocktail is made of the heart of a ripe watermelon. Cut balls with a good-sized French potato cutter, marinate with a sugar sirup flavored delicately with orange rind. The juice of the orange may be added to the sirup, cutting down some of the water, if preferred. Garnish with a sprig of mint and serve ice cold. Peaches, pears, grapes of various kinds as well as berries make splendid possibilities for cocktails.

Mutton With Peas.—Take a piece of lamb or mutton for stewing, simmer in boiling water with one small onion and three cloves, a pepper corn and an eighth of a bay leaf, for flavor; when tender and ready to serve remove the meat to a hot platter, prepare the gravy by thickening with flour and butter worked to a paste and stirred into the liquor from the meat. Cook until smooth, strain and add two to three cupfuls of fresh green peas, cooked and poured around the meat. The seasoning of salt and pepper must be added before the meat or gravy is well cooked, in order to be well seasoned.

Salad Chiffonade.—Arrange lettuce, pepper grass, tender green mustard and strips of pimento in a salad bowl; cover with French dressing and serve well chilled.

Radish Sandwiches.—Wash a dozen crisp, fresh radishes and chop finely; add four nut meats minced and four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Spread on slices of buttered oat bread.

Quick Oat Bread.—Take two and one-quarter cupfuls of rolled oats; put through the meat grinder; add four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of milk, one egg well-beaten and two tablespoonfuls of corn sirup. Bake in a greased breadpan 40 minutes.

"HAVE A HEART."

The hearts of young animals are all easily cooked and make a delicious meal. Cut in slices and saute in a little butter, cooking not too long, then serve piping hot.

Boiled Heart With Rice and Raisins.—Wash the heart, remove the tubes and gristle, cover with boiling water and cook ten minutes, then simmer very slowly on the back of the stove or in a fireless cooker until tender. Add washed rice, salt and pepper, using three-fourths of a cupful of rice, a teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper; cook until the rice is tender. Drain the liquor from the rice, add three-fourths of a cupful of raisins, half a cupful of walnuts cut in bits, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and bring to the boiling point. Place the heart in the center of a platter, surround with cooked rice, pour nuts and raisins over the heart and garnish with parsley.

Kidney a la Pen.—Wash one kidney, remove the tough portions and tubes, parboil changing the water two or three times. Drain, roll in seasoned flour and cook in three tablespoonfuls of drippings. Remove to a hot platter and keep warm. Slice four large onions, and cook in this fat, remove them when yellow to the serving dish. Add two cupfuls of boiling water to the fat in the pan and add six cooked potatoes cut in thick slices. Bring to the boiling point, add four tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with a third of a cupful of cold water. Stir and cook, add a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet, with salt and pepper to taste. When the potatoes are thoroughly heated, remove them to the platter, reheat the kidney sauce and pour over the potatoes. Surround with the onions and serve a la once.

Purée of Peas.—Cook a pint of tender green peas and put through a sieve; add a tablespoonful of butter mixed with two of flour, salt and pepper to taste. Cook until the flour is well cooked, add a cup of milk, heat and whip with a Dover egg beater, then serve at once. If there are more to serve, the amount of milk may be increased without injuring the flavor.

MILK THAT WILL NOT SOUR

It's a fact. You'll be a bit skeptical, though, when we say, "Here's a milk that won't sour."

It can't sour. It's dry. It comes in the form of a powder as fine as flour. Watch the daily papers for the advertisements of this new product, Golden State Powdered Skim Milk.

How is it used? Well, just when milk is needed you add water that transforms the powder to a liquid. Nothing could be simpler. The convenience of it is astonishing.

Best of all, this powdered milk doesn't taste cooked. It has the natural flavor of pure milk—fresh and sweet.

We want you to have a sample. Ask for it.

JUDGE P. F. GOSBEY SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

Judge P. F. Gosbey, who presided as Superior Judge in this county for the past twelve years, is a candidate for re-election. He has performed the duties of his office at all times in a capable and efficient manner and should be re-elected.

Judge Gosbey was born in Santa Clara May 15, 1859, and was graduated from the Santa Clara high school in 1875, and from the University of the Pacific in 1880. He taught school for five years, four years of which were in the San Jose high school. He was graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in 1888 and practiced law for twenty years. He was elected to the office of Superior Judge in 1908 and re-elected to this office in 1914.

The record which Judge Gosbey has made has received the unanimous endorsement of the Santa Clara County Bar Association. He is a "Square Deal" judge, a statement all who have had dealings in his court will endorse. The knowledge of Judge Gosbey's ability as a jurist is not confined to Santa Clara county alone. His reputation has spread to all parts of California and his services are in constant demand to preside at important litigations in the courts of other counties.

Miss Lucille Rogers of Porterville is the guest of her aunt, Miss Mattie Curran.

The Lee Hutchins family returned to Turlock this week after a short visit at the M. Sholz home.

Mrs. Emily P. Gard has returned from Berkeley where she was taking courses at the U. C. summer school.

Dad Sturtvant was no sooner home from his trip than he was "on the job" literally, getting our streets presentable again. It is not easy to get men at this season of the year so he got busy with the sweeper brush and helped house-clean. It is a disgrace the way our streets are used as dumping grounds for papers and refuse. Help us keep tidy.

MAINE ROMANCE AND HISTORY OF PAST 100 YEARS

Colony Established on Pine
Tree's Shore Before Landing of Pilgrims.

STATE HOLDS CELEBRATION

Coast First Visited by John Cabot in 1498—Maine Blazed Path to National Prohibition—Produced
Many Men of Note.

Portland Me.—One hundred years ago Maine became a state of the Union, and this year the event is to be officially observed with a great celebration, the principal feature of which will take place at Portland from June 28 to July 5.

While Maine is only a century old as a state, in reality the territory was one of the first settled sections of North America. A colony had been established on its shores 16 years before the pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620. The Maine coast, barring, of course, possible discovery by the early Norsemen, was first visited, it is believed, by John Cabot, the English explorer, in 1498, only six years after the discovery of the new world by Columbus. In 1501 the Portuguese explorer Corte-Real, came to Maine, and in 1524 Verrazano, an Italian, sailing under a French commission, cruised along the coast. In 1525 a Spaniard, Gomez, discovered and named the Penobscot river Rio de las Gomez, or Stag river, and in 1526 the French explorer Thetvet visited the territory and returned to Europe with a story of Mumbega, Maine's mythical city.

It was in 1565 that the renowned son of Great Britain, Sir John Hawkins, came to Maine, and two years later three survivors of his second expedition crossed its interior, the first white men to visit any part of the present state away from the coast line. In 1602 Captain Bartholomew Gosnold explored its southwestern shore, and in 1603 Capt. Martin Pring, a British trader discovered Casco bay, on which is now located the city of Portland.

First Settlement.
The premier attempt at settlement was made in 1604 by Sieur de Monts, the famous French explorer, who established the first colony in what is now the United States, north of Florida, within the borders of the present state of Maine, on Neutral Island in the St. Croix river, near what is now the city of Calais. The renowned Champlain was a member of the party and cruised along the Maine coast as far east as the Kennebec river, naming Mount Desert Island. After a terrible year, in which the majority of the party died from exposure and disease, the colony was obliged to give up its existence.

In 1607, the first English colony was established at Popham, at the mouth of the Kennebec river, by George Popham. This and the colony of Jamestown, Va., founded the same year, were the first English settlements on the Atlantic coast. The little group, however, after the death of its founder, was obliged to abandon the site. The colony, however, established one notable record, for it constructed, during its year of suffering, the Virginia, the first vessel to be built in North America.

In 1613, the French Jesuits organized a mission on Mount Desert Island and in 1614 the coast of Maine was visited by Capt. John Smith of Pocahontas fame, who made the first reliable map of it and named many of its principal points, including Cape Elizabeth. He was the first to apply the name New England to this northeastern section of the United States.

Only three years after the landing of the Pilgrims Capt. Christopher Levett established a trading post on one of the islands now within the limits of Portland, and in 1632 the foundations of the present city were established by George Cleeve and Richard Tucker. Previous to this, however, in 1628, settlements had been made along the shores of Casco bay on territory now within the limits of Brunswick and Cape Elizabeth.

First Chartered City.
In 1641 occurred another notable event in the history of America, when Sir Ferdinando Gorges established the first chartered city in the United States under the name of Gorgeana. This is now the town of York.

The year 1775 was a memorable one in the annals of Maine. In June the first naval battle of the Revolutionary war, the first naval engagement of the present United States and the first time the British flag was struck to Americans on land or sea, occurred off Machias, Maine, when the British warship Margaretta was captured by the American ship Unity. The latter was commanded by Capt. Jeremiah O'Brien of Machias, often called "the father of the American navy," and for his notable achievement he was given a vote of thanks by congress.

Another historic event of the year was the march of Benedict Arnold and his army across Maine in an attempt to capture the city of Quebec.

Falmouth, now the city of Portland, also was bombarded and destroyed in 1775 by a British fleet under Mowatt. In 1779 Castine, whose career forms one of the most romantic pages in American history, was captured by the British, and it was in this engagement that the famous Sir John Moore, the subject of that immortal poem, "The Burial of Sir John Moore," received his baptism of fire. In that battle Paul Revere, who only a few years before had made his memorable ride, led the Massachusetts detachment of troops.

In 1803 Commodore Edward Preble of Portland commanded the American squadron at Tripoli which defeated the Barbary pirates, and upon his return to the United States was received with great distinction and given a vote of thanks and awarded a medal by congress.

"My Lost Youth."

Hundreds of thousands have read Longfellow's immortal poem "My Lost Youth," in which he describes his native city of Portland, and in which he has made famous the naval battle between the American warship Enterprise and the British warship Boxer fought off the eastern end of Casco bay. In this bloody engagement the captains of the two ships were killed in action and both were buried in the old Eastern cemetery at Portland, their graves, side by side, being visited annually by tourists from every section of the world.

The year 1814 was another notable one in the history of the state. During it the present city of Eastport was captured by the British and held as a part of Canadian territory for about four years. The second capture of Castine by the British also occurred, and a day or two later was fought the remarkable battle of Hampden, much overlooked by historians, and in which both American and British soldiers were killed, and the present cities of Bangor and Belfast captured.

On March 15, 1820, Maine officially became a separate state of the Union, up to this time it having been a part of Massachusetts and known as the district of Maine.

In 1839 occurred one of the most notable events in the history of the United States and in which Maine was the great factor around which revolved the principal incidents. This was the Aroostook war which threatened hostilities between Great Britain and the United States. Large numbers of troops were raised and immense sums of money appropriated by both nations for the expected conflict, the commanding officer for the United States being the renowned Gen. Winfield Scott. Actual bloodshed was averted, however, and the cause of all the trouble, the northeastern boundary of Maine, was adjusted by a treaty negotiated by Daniel Webster, secretary of state, and Lord Ashburton, representing Great Britain.

Pioneer in Prohibition.

Maine was the pioneer which blazed the path of national prohibition when in 1851 the state adopted an amendment to its constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

In all of the wars, from the Revolutionary down to the world war Maine has more than done its share in the cause of right and its record along this line is one of the most glorious pages in its history.

The world owes much to the sons and daughters of Maine. It has given it some of the most remarkable men and women in history. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, America's greatest poet, was born at Portland. Sir Hiram S. Maxim, inventor of the Maxim machine gun, first saw the light of day at Sanguenville. His equally famous brother, Hudson Maxim, inventor of smokeless powder, is a native of Orneville. Lillian Nordica, one of the world's greatest singers, was born at Farmington, and Artemus Ward, the renowned humorist, at Waterford.

Franklin Simmons and Benjamin Paul Akers, two of the world's greatest sculptors, were born respectively at Webster and Westbrook. Rev. Elijah Kellogg, whose name will always live as the author of "Spartacus to the Gladiators" and other orations, as well as the famous "Elm Island" stories for boys, was born at Portland.

Many of America's greatest characters in history were born in Maine. Among these are Hannibal Hamlin, vice president of the United States with Lincoln, born at Paris; Sir William Phipps, first royal governor of Massachusetts, first American on whom Great Britain conferred knighthood and the conqueror of Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia, at Woolwich; Dorothea Lynde Dix, famed for her work for the insane, and as head of the female nurses during the civil war, at Hampden.

Many Notable Leaders.

Some of the most notable leaders in America's public life also were Maine-born, among them Thomas Brackett Reed, renowned parliamentarian and former speaker of congress, at Portland; John D. Long, former secretary of the navy and governor of Massachusetts, at Buckfield; Rufus King, twice United States minister to Great Britain and one of the principals in the drafting of the American constitution at Scarborough; William P. Frye, American diplomat and former acting president of the United States senate at Lewiston; Lot M. Morrill, secretary of the treasury, United States senator and governor of Maine, at Belgrade; Melville W. Fuller, former chief justice of the United States Supreme court, at Augusta; Nelson Dingley and Eugene Hale, widely known statesmen, born respectively at Durham and Turner; Hugh McCulloch, famous financier and former secretary of the treasury, born at Kennebunk; Scott Smith Prentiss, one of America's most famous orators and said to be the greatest extemporaneous speaker that ever lived, at Portland; Gen. Neal Dow, father of prohibition, at Portland; Annie Louise Cary, world renowned singer, at Wayne.—W. W. Hoegg, Jr. in Chicago Post.

WM. KENT FOR SENATOR

We call attention in this issue to the announcement of Wm. Kent for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator. Kent is a big, fearless man, well equipped for the position to which he aspires. When he gave Muir Woods—of the giant Sequoias—to the nation some years ago, Theodore Roosevelt, then President, insisted that the new National Park should be known as the "Kent Woods." Kent turned down the suggestion with this personal note to the President:

"So many millions of better people have died forgotten that to stencil one's own name on a benefaction seems to carry with it an implication of mundane immortality, as being something purchasable."

"I have five good husky boys that I am trying to bring up to a knowledge of democracy and to a realizing sense of the rights of the 'other fellow,' doctrines which you, sir, have taught with more vigor and effect than any man in my time. If these boys cannot keep the name of Kent alive, I am willing it should be forgotten."—Adv.
